The 5th Annual Conference

of the European Political Science Association

25th – 27th June 2015

Vienna

Venue: Schloss Schönbrunn and Springer Schlößl, Vienna Austria

Schloss Schönbrunn was the summer residence of the royal family of Habsburg. The building, together with its gardens, is catalogued on the UNESCO’s world heritage list.

In 1961, John F. Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev met at Schönbrunn to discuss bilateral relations and world politics. Back then, the meeting was described as successful and harmonic. Two months later, the Berlin Wall was built, and sixteen months later, the Cuba crisis saw both countries on the brink of war.

Political Science Research and Methods

THE JOURNAL OF THE EUROPEAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION

Editors-in-Chief Cameron Thies, University of Arizona, USA and Vera Troeger, University of Warwick, UK

Political Science Research and Methods (PSRM) is a general political science journal dedicated to publishing original scholarly work of the highest quality from all subfields of political science.

PSRM seeks research that applies rigorous methods to empirical or theoretical problems and promotes a rigorous scientific approach to the study of politics. Work at the intersection of political science and related disciplines such as economics and sociology is also welcomed.

Sign up for content alerts, find out how to submit your paper, recommend PSRM to your librarian and more at the journal homepage here:

A brief history of the Caves

The Caves is the vaults that make up the sub structure of Edinburgh’s South Bridge.

Prior to the building of the bridges this area was very affluent due to the proximity to the Infirmary and the surgeons living in the area. In fact the first autopsy was performed at the bottom of the road.

In 1765 it was decided that the need for defence was over and for trade the New Town, Old Town and South Side all needed to be connected so they decided to build a bridge. Firstly this was going to be funded as a Toll Bridge and they got as far as deciding on the tolls, then it was to be funded by a National Lottery which is pretty forward thinking for the time.

They finally decided to sell the area in lots, giving you a shop of the Bridges – the first custom built shops in Europe – and workshops above and below. In modern terms they raised the equivalent of £100,000 an acre which is more than Britain bought half of America from the French at the same time in the Louisiana Congress!!!

The Edinburgh Vaults are a series of chambers formed in the nineteen arches of the South Bridge in Edinburgh, completed in 1788. For around 30 years the vaults were used to house taverns, cobblers and other tradesmen and as the storage space for illicit material. Construction of the bridge had been rushed and the surface was never sealed against water. The Vaults began to flood. As the vaults deteriorated the businesses left and the very poorest of Edinburgh's citizens moved in.

Slum dwellers took over the vaults and they became a renowned red light district with countless brothels and pubs operating within the abandoned complex. The vaults also served as additional slum housing for the city's poor. Living conditions were appalling. The rooms were cramped, dark and damp. There was no sunlight, poorly circulated air and no running water or sanitation. Many rooms housed families of more than ten people. Crimes, including robbery and murder, soon plagued the vaults, the most infamous of which were the Burke and Hare murders between 1827 and 1828. Life expectancy for those living here was 18 months.

It is not known when the vaults complex was closed down, but some suggesting as early as c. 1835 and others as late as c. 1875. All that is known is that at some point tons of rubble were dumped into the vaults making them inaccessible.

The vaults were rediscovered by former Scottish rugby internationalist Norrie Rowan after he found a tunnel leading to them in the 1980s. In the 1990s he along with his son excavated the vaults creating the stunning and unique venue that is The Caves. One of the things found when excavating the vaults was thousands and thousands of oyster shells which were the staple diet of the working classes in the 18th century!

In one vault further up the Street we found the door lintel of the Edinburgh’s former Lord Provost whose house they blew up in a bid to assassinate Lord Darnley. He was later found stabbed to death in an orchard. You can clearly see the initials AC, the family crest and the words “The Lord is our refuge and helper”.

The bottom bars small vaults have many stories to tell from once serving as the stables to the French Cavalry who were at one time bodyguards to the Royal Family. As well as once being known as a dry dairy. Cows were kept down here which never saw the light of day and whose milk was sold to the locals. The cow herder's family lived across the passage, in a house whose remains pre-dates the Bridge itself – with the original terracotta floor tiles still intact!
A brief history of the Rowantree

The Rowantree is steeped in colourful history, and every vaulted room that has been sympathetically restored to its former glory has a story to tell and a special place in Scotland’s past. Originally The Rowantree was home to the renowned Lucky Middlemiss Tavern, an oyster tavern of the Scottish Enlightenment era that saw literary greats and Enlightenment figures throng the watering hole. James Hutton, Robert Burns, David Hume, Adam Smith, Deacon Brodie, Watt and Benjamin Franklin were just some of the regulars, with Robert Louis Stevenson once describing it as “a rabbit warren not only by the numbers of its twist and turns, but by its dark stairs frequented by loiterers and such other such low characters and as treacherous a place as I saw.”
